WEALTHY MISS CRUM STANDS BY SEATON.

Charles Seaton, a young man of good family, who Capt. Titus says is one of the most polished and dangerous swindlers of women Le knows, was arraigned to-day in Ycrkville Court.

Twice arrested before, known to have a wife, with half a dozen womer witnesses against him, Miss Estelle Crum, a wealthy young woman of Columbus, O., still believes in him and is eady to marry him. She stood beside him in court. She hired a lawyer for him. When he set out to find oril for him.

the Central Office. He had his men on hand yesterday just as Miss Miller was about to hand over the money. The police believe that Seaton was, the instigator and perhaps the operator of several other schemes for fleeding women looking for employment.

He was arrested in 1900 for stealing

He was arrested in 1900 for stealing jewelry from a house in which he had been engaged as tutor for young culderen, but nothing could be proved against him. Last year he started a bogus fund for the relief of the familie sufferers of India, which was exposed. He was arrested and put in the Tombs. There came to him in the Tombs every day a sweet, pretty little woman—his wife. She brought him food and dainties, and worked with might and main for him. Eventually she secured his release through the indusence of friends whose ald she had endisted.

In Yorkville Court this morning an Evening World reporter asked him how he was going to marry Miss Crum when he had a wife living.

"Don't you bother any about that," replied Seaton jauntily; "that'll be fixed all right."
